It was up to Chief Meyers now. Wood knocked down a smash from Meyers that came like a bullet, and recovered the ball in time to throw the Chief out at first. TWO MITS. ONE BUN.

Engle went in to but for Wood. He lifted an easy fly to centre, but Snodgrass muffed the ball for a terrible error, and Engle took second. Hooper hunted two fouls and then flied out to Snodgrass. Yerkes got a base on balls and it was up to Speaker to save the day for Boston. He lifted an easy foul fly that fell safe between Merkle and Meyers Speaker then singled into right, sending Engl home for the tying run. Lewis walked and filled the bases. Gardner filed to Devore and Terkes scored the winning run. ONE MIT. TWO BUNS.

John F. McIntyre, Becker's counsel, confined his cross-examination of Mrs. Rosenthal within a narrow scope after she had testified to the details of the defendant's raid on Rosenthal's gambling house and his statement to her that it "had to be either him or Herman" and that he could not, therefore, avoid making the raid. She also brought in the alleged Becker investment of $1,500 in her husband's resort.

WIFE AT HIS BEDSIDE NOW THE CHIEF NURSE

Roosevelt Spent Restful Night, Ate Hearty Breakfast and Fear of Infection Now Seems Remote.

(Special to The Evening World.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.-The news leaked out this afternoon that the fourth rib of Col. Roosevelt's right side is fractured. This is the rib which received the full force of the bullet fired by Schrank, the would-be assassin, in Milwaukee Monday night.

The X-ray pictures taken in the Emergency Hospital in Milwaukee did not show the fracture, nor did they reveal the exact location of the bullet. This fact made necessary the taking of other radiographs in Mercy Hospital yesterday, These revealed the fracture, it is stated.

A fractured rib adds a complication to the case, but the surgeons are not alarmed. It was the fracture that caused Col. Roosevelt pain in breathing yesterday—pain which has to a considerable extent disappeared. While the fractured rib furnishes a complication in the case, it does not add particularly to the seriousness of the wound, for all the surgeons fear is blood poisoning. They have little doubt that the fracture will heal quickly and cleanly, as Col. Roosevelt's general health was never better.

Evening World called up Dr. John B. Murphy at Mercy Hospital, Chicago, over the long distance telephone at 1 o'clock this afternoon (12 o'clock Chicago time) and asked for the latest news concerning Col. Roosevelt's condition and prospects. Dr. Murphy's tone was much more confident to-day than when he talked over the long distance wire with The Evening World yesterday.

"How is the patient to-day?" asked The Evening World.

"He says he is fine," replied Dr. Murphy, "and I can indorse his statement. His condition is very good, much better than it was yesterday. His temperature is down to about 98 and his respiration and pulse are much more favorable.

"But the best sign of all is the almost total absence of pain or irritation in the pleura, caused by the injury to the rib which stopped the bullet in the chest wall. This pain was present yesterday and caused some concern. It is plain that the subsidence of the irritation at the point where the rib is affected is a sign that things are in pretty good shope at that particular location."

"How about the possibility of blood poisoning?" the doctor was

"That has diminished," he replied. "That liability diminishes in proportion as the general condition of the patient improves. The longer the signs of blood poisoning are absent the more the doctor is heartened, for the absence of such signs indicates the healthy state of the wound."
